Greeting

Dear citizens of the Düren district,

Natural disasters, political conflicts, or technical defects can significantly impact our highly modernized world in everyday life. For this reason, the municipalities and the Düren district are working closely together to mitigate the consequences of such events as much as possible. However, until normal conditions are restored in the event of an incident, there will be deviations from the usual.

Therefore, you are also encouraged to take independent precautions as part of self-help. With this citizen information, we would like to inform you about the plans on how emergency calls can still be made in crisis situations. You can also find this information on the websites of the municipalities and the Düren district.

Inform yourself in good time! If communication technology fails, the internet will no longer be available either.

Why Emergency Reporting Points?

Widespread power outages are unlikely but not entirely unthinkable scenarios.

Once the power is out, mobile and telephone networks will soon stop working, and the internet will also be disrupted.

Other scenarios are also conceivable, in which the usual telephone network might not be available.

If an emergency occurs, making an emergency call will no longer be possible. In this case, the municipalities will activate the so-called emergency reporting points. At specific locations within each municipality, emergency personnel will be stationed to receive your request for help and forward it to the unified control center of the Düren district. This center will then send help to you.

Examples of emergencies include :

- Shortness of breath, unconsciousness, stroke, injury
- Building, vehicle, forest fire
- Traffic accident, explosion
- Burglary, act of violence, suspicious situations
- Flooding, person in distress, gas leak

In an emergency...

- Do not put yourself in danger!
- Perform life-saving immediate measures (e.g., pressure bandage, recovery position)!
- Report the emergency or send someone to report it!
- Return and wait for the emergency personnel!
